Ethiqua was born as a social experiment with the goal of discovering what people around the world care about most. We aim to bring global attention to the issues that resonate in people's hearts, seeking solutions that reflect a shared desire to improve the world.

Each user can propose a law they find important, expressing it in 200 characters. Proposals remain anonymous and are open for community voting, where users can express their approval by giving a star. There are no comments or negative judgments: the more stars a proposal receives, the higher it rises in the rankings, making visible the ideas that gather the broadest moral support.

Ethiqua is dedicated exclusively to constructive proposals. Every law is subject to an anti-hate check by our team to ensure that only positive and respectful ideas are shared. We reserve the right to report and remove accounts that do not adhere to our guidelines, to maintain a safe and open environment for dialogue.

Anonymity and Security

All Ethiqua users are guaranteed anonymity. We do not collect or share personal data, and all interactions remain secure and transparent. What matters are the ideas, not who proposes them.
